Module 8
Emily Claus

For my folders, I broke them down into three main categories. The first category was documents; the modules that were reflections, interviews, and/or writing based. The second was design, which included all the modules that required a design, wireframe, sitemap, etc. Finally, there was the extra credit folder, for the three remaining modules.

I considered doing it by chronological order, but the topics tended to jump around a lot, and I felt this made it easier to find what you are looking for, especially if you don't know the specific module number. I also kept the folder amount down to three, because I felt it made things simpler and less cluttered.